DOES IT PAY TO TREAT GRASSES AND LEGUMES?

A noted plant pathologist and a well-known agronomist both with the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, reported recently in "Crops and Soils", that "since field experiments with seed of grasses and small legumes treated with various fungicides do not consistently produce better stands when compared to the non-treated seed, seed treatment cannot be generally recommended for these crops."

UNTIL WE GET CONCLUSIVE PROOF THAT IT PAYS, we will not treat Keystone grasses and legumes, because it means unnecessary expense to the farmer plus the fact that handling treated seed can be irritating to the farmer and perhaps hazardous.

WE SUGGEST, that you pass this information on to your customers and assure them that they will get more for their money by continuing to buy
